Computer vision is an interdisciplinary field that deals with how computers can be made to gain high-level understanding from digital images or videos. From the perspective of engineering, it seeks to automate tasks that the human visual system can do. Computer vision tasks include methods for acquiring, processing, analyzing and understanding digital images, and extraction of high-dimensional ...

Fingerprint identification, known as dactyloscopy, or hand print identification, is the process of comparing two instances of friction ridge skin impressions (see Minutiae), from human fingers or toes, or even the palm of the hand or sole of the foot, to determine whether these impressions could have come from the same individual. The flexibility of friction ridge skin means that no two finger ...

To recognize an object certain steps must be taken. Information is received through the retina in the form of light. Visual processing occurs to organize the data by determining size, shape, contoured edges, and surface so that the information can be compared to other representations of objects in memory until recognition occurs (Robinson-Riegler & Robinson-Riegler, 2008).
