gled to her feet. Seize her! Don't let her get away, one of the priests snarled while another lunged for her. A third person, a Temple guard, grabbed her by her upper arm, his nails digging into her tender flesh. Mary tried to resist, but the man's grip held fast. The terrified woman began to tremble uncontrollably.

Later, when her brother Lazarus had died, she is found at His feet as a mourner (John 11:32). Lastly, she is found at His feet as a worshiper (John 12:3). On this third occasion, Mary is found at the feet of the Lord, no longer to receive His words and His sympathy, but to give to Him the worship of a heart that loved Him.

And yet you may still be lying at His feet conscious of your unworthiness, and bowed into the very dust under a sense of His love. We must leave those other positions and consider the one in our text. And we have only two remarks to make—namely, first, that at His feet is a becoming posture. And, secondly, at His feet is a helpful posture. I.
