described this etching using the poet Robert Browning's weighty phrase, as "Love among the Ruins". He has recently written, "elf ever there was a time when we need to return to this work of Durer, perhaps this is a time of "Love among the Ruins". Durer's scene seems as contemporary as a cartoon in the New Yorker.

Love Among The Ruins - Poem by Robert Browning

Love Among the Ruins is a story that Evelyn had written in October 1950, shortly after the general election of February which saw the post-war Labour government returned to power with a narrow majority. Then it had been called 'A Pilgrim's Progress' and it had been rejected by the editors it had been sent to.
